Adams County Colorado to implement Aurigo CPMS to automate its projects, December 07th, 2010

Aurigo's product wins bid participated by several CMPS providers.

September, 2010 - Aurigo Software Technologies Inc., a leading software products and solutions provider in the Architecture, Engineering and Construction (AEC) vertical, has acquired a new customer in United States. Adams County Public Works department will implement Aurigo's end to end CPMS solution for their construction projects, procurement and contract management processes. shortly.

Aurigo CPMS, a web based project management solution is targeted at government agencies, project management companies, project owners, and real estate developers to manage the complete lifecycle of any capital project development.

Adams County required a product that could handle multiple functions seamlessly such as developing estimates, bid management, contract management, construction administration and collection of field information. The County will implement Aurigo CPMS to automate and streamline their existing manual contract management process and increase the scope of visibility on their construction projects.

Kevin Koenig, Vice President of Operations for Aurigo Software Technologies Inc. said, "We are pleased to have won the bid for Adams County's CPMS requirement and are sure that Aurigo CPMS will streamline all of Adams County's capital project management processes. We look forward to a progressive relationship with the County."

"Aurigo has the experience and quality to help us gain visibility into our ongoing projects. Their product was judged superior to the products that were evaluated. We believe it will help eliminate inaccuracies in information collected and increase accuracy of contractor payments." as quoted by Rene Valdez, Adams County.
